

Lesson: Subject and Object Pronouns

1. Subject Pronouns

A subject pronoun replaces the subject (the person or thing doing the action) in a sentence. It is used to avoid repetition and make sentences clearer.

- I: Used when the speaker is talking about themselves (Example: I like apples.)
- You: Used when talking directly to someone (Example: You are my friend.)
- He: Used for a male person (Example: He plays soccer.)
- She: Used for a female person (Example: She sings very well.)
- It: Used for an animal or object (Example: It is a big house.)
- We: Used when the speaker includes themselves in a group (Example: We go to school every day.)
- They: Used for a group of people, animals, or objects (Example: They have a new car.)

2. Object Pronouns

An object pronoun replaces the object (the person or thing receiving the action) in a sentence.

Difference Between Subject and Object Pronouns

- A subject pronoun does the action in a sentence. (Example: She reads a book.)
- An object pronoun receives the action in a sentence. (Example: I see her every day.)
- Me: Used when 'I' is the object (Example: John helps me.)
- You: Used when 'you' is the object (Example: I call you every day.)
- Him: Used when 'he' is the object (Example: She likes him.)
- Her: Used when 'she' is the object (Example: We see her at school.)
- It: Used for an animal or object (Example: I have a cat. I love it.)
- Us: Used when 'we' is the object (Example: They help us.)
- Them: Used when 'they' is the object (Example: I talk to them.)
